

Meet the Journal Editors - Journal of Management Education

Marissa Edwards, University of Queensland

Abstract

The Journal of Management Education (JME) is our Society's original journal and is well-respected for its SoTL research, instructional innovations, and essays. Come to this session to learn about JME's mission and scope, how to align your manuscript with the journal's sections, and hear advice for preparing your manuscript. We will discuss our editorial philosophy and the submission and review process. The session will conclude with a Q&A session and, time permitting, an opportunity to discuss your manuscripts with members of the editorial team in breakout sessions.

Session Format

We will begin with a short introduction section where the associate editors, editorial board members, and the co-editors will say hello. An ice-breaker will follow this to get a sense of who is in the room by using the chat feature and polls if possible. Next, the co-editors will move into an informative presentation outlining JME's mission and scope, suggestions of how authors can align their manuscript with the journal's sections, and offer advice for preparing your manuscript. We will highlight JME's developmental approach to the review process. For the last section, we will facilitate a Q&A and potentially breakout rooms with participants and the editorial team members with the remaining time.
